

Choose Your Next Blog Topic

Each topic below is built around what your potential clients are already searching for. Check the topics that interest you and we'll handle the rest.

How to use this: Check any topics you'd like us to write. You can pick one or several — we'll prioritize based on what's most likely to bring new clients to your site. If you have notes or a preference for how a topic is approached, jot them in the notes section at the bottom.

TOPIC 01

What Is IFS Therapy? A Plain-Language Guide to Internal Family Systems

Most people have never heard of IFS before finding your site. This post explains the model in approachable language — what "parts" are, how the work is done, and who it helps most. Position you as the go-to IFS resource in Washington.

IFS Therapy

Internal Family Systems

Anxiety

Trauma

TOPIC 02

How to Know If You're Ready for Couples Therapy (It's Not Just for Crisis)

One of the biggest barriers to couples therapy is the belief you have to be on the verge of divorce to go. This post reframes it as a proactive tool for any relationship — and speaks directly to the couples in Renton and across Washington who are searching but hesitating.

Couples Therapy

Relationships

Renton WA

TOPIC 03

Online Therapy in Washington State: What It Is, How It Works, and Who It's Right For

Targets one of the highest-volume searches for your practice. Walks people through what to expect from telehealth therapy — the tech, the process, the effectiveness — and addresses the most common hesitations about starting online.

Online TherapyTelehealthWashington StateArizona

TOPIC 04

Anxiety vs. Stress: When Everyday Worry Becomes Something More

People search "do I have anxiety" and "anxiety vs stress" constantly. This post helps readers self-identify, explains what anxiety actually looks like (not just nervousness), and naturally leads them toward getting support. High traffic potential, low competition.

AnxietyMental HealthSelf-Assessment

TOPIC 05

What Happens in a First Therapy Session? A Walkthrough for First-Timers

Fear of the unknown is the number one reason people delay starting therapy. This post removes that barrier by walking through exactly what a first session looks like — what you'll be asked, what you don't have to share yet, and what to expect leaving. Converts browsers into bookers.

Starting TherapyFirst SessionNew Clients

TOPIC 06

Therapy for Life Transitions: When Everything Changes at Once

Divorce, career change, loss, relocation, becoming a parent — these are moments when people suddenly consider therapy for the first time. This post speaks directly to that moment and shows how therapy helps people move through change rather than get stuck in it.

Life TransitionsGriefChange

TOPIC 07

Men and Therapy: Why It's Hard to Ask for Help and Why It's Worth It

Men are significantly underrepresented in therapy and actively searching for reassurance that it's not weakness to go. This post meets them where they are — validating the hesitation and making the case for it without being preachy. Targets a high-need, underserved audience.

Men's Mental Health

Anxiety

Depression

TOPIC 08

How IFS Therapy Helps with Trauma (Without Reliving It)

A common fear about trauma therapy is that it means going back into painful memories in a raw, unprotected way. IFS works differently — this post explains why the approach is gentler, how it builds internal safety first, and why that matters for trauma survivors who've tried other methods.

Trauma

IFS Therapy

PTSD

Healing

Your Notes / Preferences

Any specific angle, personal story, or direction you'd like us to take? Write it here.
